

Imogen Andrews

Imogen says:

I have never had any formal art training. I have a degree in Psychology which I really struggled to complete, partly due to feeling out of my depth and partly because I tend to lack motivation unless I am creating something! Feeling lost after university I started to make pieces of art and explored making collages. I found that I loved the process of searching for the right colours, segments of faces or objects through magazines. It is very therapeutic and I came to the realization that I am much better at expressing myself through images than words.
