

Rhyanna Melanson

Rhyanna says:

My name is Rhyanna Melanson. I have dyslexia and live in Canada. Because dyslexia runs in my family, I was exposed to numerous activities at a young age – sport, art, music – so I could hopefully find success somewhere, particularly since success within school did not look good early on. From the activities I was exposed to, art resonated.

I enjoyed music, dance and photography since these arts permitted me an alternative means to communicate - other than written words. For art, each image is worth 1,000 words (that I don't have to spell).

I am currently working as a biologist in the field of science communication. With all the recent exposure to nature, over the past few years my art has begun to incorporate more naturalistic elements.
