

Helen Arkell

Dyslexia Charity

Hello <<First Name>>,

Welcome to our November Newsletter!

Thanks to the Theo Paphitis Dyslexia Bursary, we're excited to offer FREE places on the Helen Arkell Dyslexia Charity's six-week online Supporting Learners with Dyslexia course to teachers and teaching assistants in state schools.

The course runs for six Fridays starting 8 November 2024, with each session from 9:30 am to 12:30 pm. Recordings will be available for those who miss live sessions.

To apply for a bursary-funded place, simply fill out this short application form. Please note, those who have already received a free place are not eligible for another.

Paid for places are also available on the course for teaching staff who are not working in state schools as well as parents and carers.

Seen The Unseen: Ceramics Workshop

Join us this half-term for a free, family-friendly ceramics workshop exploring dyslexia and invisible disabilities. In collaboration with UCA Surrey Galleries and 318 Ceramics, participants will create clay discs representing the achievements of people with dyslexia. The finished work will be displayed at the Helen Arkell Dyslexia Charity.

We want to extend a heartfelt thank you to everyone who supported us during Dyslexia Awareness Week. From being charity guest at Farnham FC, which raised £100, to the incredible efforts of our Royal Parks Half Marathon team, the community spirit has been inspiring!

After weeks of training, Ceri, Joanna, Peter, Alice, Jack, and Chris proudly represented us, running through London's beautiful Royal Parks and raising an amazing £4,140 so far.

Thank you for helping us raise awareness and vital funds to support those with dyslexia!

December Touch Typing Sessions

Touch typing is a vital skill in today's world of technology, especially for those who struggle with handwriting. We have sessions available in December for our Touch Typing course. Sign your child up and secure their spot today.

We offer funding to low-income households for this course, email courses@helenarkell.org.uk to apply.
